THAW, IN TEARS, PACES CELL ALL THROUGH NIGHT

Agony of Hearing Story of Wife's Degradation from Her Own Lips in Open Court, Told in the Supreme Effort to Save His Life, Drives Sleep Away from His Eyes.

By Charles Somerville.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, in the cause of Harry Thaw's life and freedom went on with her great sacrifice today, and under the sound of her soft, childish voice, and under the splendid leadership of Delmas, there was no minute of the day when the jury was not having placed before it the story of cumulative wrongs and sorrows borne by Harry Thaw, until, his defenders declare, his brain broke down and he became sick with delusions so that he killed Stanford White.

The defense has shown that White most villainously humiliated the child-woman, the jury now know, represents the best and greatest love in Harry Thaw's life—the same class of love that they bear for their own wives.

The defense has shown that White

SOUGHT TO TURN HER AGAINST THAW

At the afternoon session yesterday in searching the girl and the young millionaire who had been loved by her, Thaw has shown how easily she was made to believe that her husband was a monster, and how easily she was made to believe that her husband was a monster, and how easily she was made to believe that her husband was a monster.

Only First Letter Admitted.

The only letter admitted was the first one offered. It was marked "A."

Delmas asked the witness to read the letter. The witness read the letter, and the jury heard the story of the love between Harry Thaw and Evelyn Nesbit.

They have been making a fool out of you.

Q. What did you tell him? A. I told him that I had been making a fool out of him.

Q. What did you tell him? A. I told him that I had been making a fool out of him.

Q. You must take the trouble to repeat what you told Mr. Thaw on that occasion.

Q. What was said at that time? A. I told him that I had been making a fool out of him.

"EVELYN THAW'S SOUL LAID BARE AND QUIVERING"

By Beatrice Fairfax.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—After weeks and months of weary waiting Evelyn Thaw has a chance to try her poor little woman's best to save her husband's life. Think that it does not happen to most of us to see a woman's soul laid bare and quivering. It is not a pleasant sight, and none of us who saw it yesterday held our heads low and our tears back.

The law is no respecter of persons. It demands the worst and it demands the best of us who are in its power.

The Love of Pretty Things.

And men's eyes, the most dangerous of all looking glances, come to Evelyn Thaw, the story and revealed it all. The love of pretty things, the love of pretty things, the love of pretty things.

The law is no respecter of persons. It demands the worst and it demands the best of us who are in its power.

Second Letter Offered.

Another letter was then offered in evidence. It was marked "B."

The law is no respecter of persons. It demands the worst and it demands the best of us who are in its power.

Exception Taken by Delmas.

"We take an exception," said Delmas. "The handwriting of this letter is not that of Harry Thaw."

The law is no respecter of persons. It demands the worst and it demands the best of us who are in its power.

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON. FEBRUARY 8, 1907.

We Felt Sure He Would Not Miss It. He Has Not Disappointed the General Expectation

Mr. Draper—thanks to his money and to Boss Lodge—will run again this Fall, either for Governor or Lieutenant-Governor. The DEMOCRATIC organization will then have as its secretary a man who is supporting the REPUBLICAN party's most obnoxious candidate.

The Punch Wins
By William F. Kirk
REDDIE is back from college—my oldest, scrappiest lad—
and now he calls me "Governor"; he used to call me "Dad."

By William F. Kirk

One of us retorts: "The feller with the punch, you say, is always sure to win: Then punch some potholes in the ground and punch some fence posts in!" Now Freddie's working every day, half an hour off for lunch. But he's mighty silent lately 'bout the fellow with the punch.
